In the matter of selecting golf clubs I want to say at the start that I am a great believer in shorter clubs than the average player uses. I happen to be six feet three inches tall, so my driver and brassic are twenty-four and one-halt inches in length. But for the man of average height I believe that farty-one inches is entirely long enough for a wooden club, with the iron clubs in proportion. LESSON NO. 3—CLUBS, GRIPS, AND STANCE. short, because I believe it insures swing, and is more dependable than any other I know. Always remembering that the fingers of the left hand. With the 41-inch shaft the head should be just a trifle heavier, with a slight give to the shaft. I longest drivers that ever lived longest drivers that ever lived. Yet he only uses a 41-inch club round 13½ ounces in weight. The man who doesn't get to play very often should use a traffe heavier club than the one who has the opportunity to play more frequently, as the slightly heavier club will steady him down a triffe and prevent a fast, jerky back-swing.

Next Lesson-(The Short Ap-Golf Fever Sure to Rise Next Month When 3 Local Tourneys Are Listed

The golf fever which simmered down almost to normal following the national "open," will again approach the epidemic stage next month. Hot weather, blighted greens and absence from town of many of the District stars have all tended to keep the royal game in more or less of a dormant stage, but the reappearance of cool weather will undoubtedly cause golfitis to crop out again in its most malignant form. No less than three tournaments, each of them a major affair, will be run off during the short space of fifteen days in October.

First on the list comes the invitation tournament of the Columbia Country Club to be held from October 13 to 15 inclusive. With the exception of the "open." "this to a tue heir innings at Columbia in the annual play for the District championship. This is a five-day, match play affair, extending from October 24 to 28 inclusive.

This, too, promises to resolve itself into a duel affair. At this writing, Mrs. T. C. Kincaid, on this writing, Mrs. T. C. Kincaid, of the short space of fifteen days in October.
